CONTENTS

Europe's twin green and digital transitions carry the promise of more sustainable and inclusive societies. But without intentional design, these transformations risk deepening existing inequalities. The JUST4ALL project responds to this risk with a strong proposition: adult learning and education (ALE) must be placed at the heart of the just transition to ensure that no one is left behind—especially those most at risk of exclusion, such as women, migrants, and lower-skilled adults.

This Policy Toolkit builds on the findings, experiences, and outputs of JUST4ALL to provide concrete guidance for designing policy-coherent adult learning systems that promote fairness, participation, and empowerment. It supports policymakers, education providers, and civil society actors in embedding social justice in ALE policies and practices.

Grounded in a multi-level process of research, dialogue, and co-creation, the Toolkit draws from:

- The Just4all Background Papers that framed key concepts and mapped the intersection of adult education with green and digital transitions, migration, and inclusion.

- The set of Good Practice Examples collected throughout Europe, highlighting how community learning, inclusive methods, and just transition initiatives are already shaping change.

- The JUST4ALL MOOC, an interactive, 8-module course built on these good practices and structured around themes such as social innovation, competences for the future, and participatory governance. Over 100 learners piloted the MOOC, offering rich feedback and engagement.

- A structured Policy Roadmap, developed through collaborative reflection and consultation, that outlines strategic directions for integrating ALE into just transition frameworks at local, national, and EU levels.

- A series of Policy Events and Webinars, featuring over 25 experts and practitioners, which created space for dialogue and knowledge exchange across sectors.

INTRODUCTION

The Toolkit is divided into thematic areas and tools that can be adapted to various contexts. It includes both tested tools from the MOOC and new tools developed during the project's final phase, along with guidance to build your own processes and apply what works in your reality.

We hope that this toolkit will encourage our collective effort and commitment into action—to support learning not only for skills, but for dignity, participation, and justice.

INTRODUCTION

The JUST4ALL Toolkit is designed not as a rigid manual, but as a dynamic and adaptable resource—one that empowers different actors to take ownership of the just transition through education, advocacy, and policy design. Whether you are a civil society organization (CSO), an educator, or a policymaker, this Toolkit offers practical guidance and ready-to-use tools to support your work in fostering fairer, more inclusive green and digital transitions.

This section is your starting point. It helps you navigate the Toolkit according to your specific role and needs, using clear, step-by-step pathways. At the heart of this process are the Fact Sheets—concise, action-oriented guides that introduce each tool, highlight its relevance, and show you how to integrate it into your own context. These fact sheets do more than present information: they invite reflection, planning, and transformation.

JUST4ALL - MOOC

Just transition is not a one-size-fits-all journey. It unfolds differently depending on local challenges, political priorities, community needs, and available resources. That's why we encourage you to build your own process—by choosing the tools that resonate most with your goals, combining them to suit your strategy, and adapting them as your work evolves.

To support this approach, we've created three tailored pathways—one for CSOs, one for educators, and one for policymakers. Each path includes relevant progressive steps. Every step introduces selected tools from the Toolkit and the broader JUST4ALL ecosystem, including good practices, background papers, and MOOC modules.

Start with the basics: do your research, gain useful knowledge through inclusive trainings and start drafting a strategy.

- Just4All MOOC
- Ulex Project
- About Doughnut Economics | DEAL
- Climate Investment Fund | Just Transition Planning Toolbox
- Practical tips: Steps for effective advocacy | EuroMed Rights

Deepen your knowledge and your strategy with some case studies: learn what works and what doesn't, craft the art of strategizing.

- Good Practices - Just4All
- European Alliance for a Just Transition
- From spears to maps: the case of Waorani resistance in Ecuador for the defence of their right to prior consultation
- Toolkit ALE4TT: adult learning for the twin transition | European Association for the Education of Adults

Master your strategy and learn how to use the data in your favor, make recommendations and get ready to expose your work to the world.

POLICY MAKERS

Area

Just Transition policies

Short Description

This briefing summarises the key concepts of Just Transition, and puts forward ideas on how the concept can be developed further. Through 5 comprehensive chapters, the tool maps some powerful Just Transition policies as well as potential gaps that need to be addressed - specifically from the Paris Agreement, the International Labor Organization, the G20 and the Sustainable Development Goals.

Target Group- Target Action

Civil Society Organizations, Educators

Key Features

Practical facts on the urgencies of the moment with suggested key actions, providing an easy-to-understand guideline for anyone working towards the just transition.

Showcase of international practical and positive case studies using a holistic approach.

Specific and detailed policy requests to relevant policy actors influencing the just transition.

Area

Energy transition, justice

Short Description

Energy transitions are not solely technological or economic shifts; they have profound social impacts that can either reinforce or challenge existing inequalities. The benefits and burdens of energy transitions are often unevenly distributed, with vulnerable communities frequently facing the greatest risks. A bigger understanding of justice in energy transitions can help reflect on the nature of these issues while identifying new ones along the way. Different ideas of justice can help us better understand what a fair or just transition might mean. The MOOC provides a foundation and set of methods to connect different aspects of energy transitions to justice.

Target Group- Target Action

Civil Society Organizations, Educators, Learners

Key Features

Free MOOC, with the possibility of a completion certificate at the end of the course (39 euros).

Self-pace course, allowing flexibility.

Theory is followed up by practice, allowing learners to develop an understanding on how to analyse energy transitions in reference to certain justice-related outcomes.

Agriculture, food

Short Description

The roadmap includes more than 100 specific policy recommendations that will vary in priority, relevance, and applicability depending on local and regional contexts, including current legislation, cultural sensitivities, community-based solutions, levels of consumption and production of animal-sourced foods, and how entrenched industrial animal agriculture is in the region. The tool provides practitioners with the adequate support to embrace the just transition instead of rejecting it.

Target Group- Target Action

Civil Society Organizations, Educators

Key Features

Available in different languages.

The document is the result of an extensive consultation amongst impacted groups, including food chain worker organisations (e.g. unions, farmworker and meat-processing workers), smallholder farmers, small-scale fishers, pastoralists, women and youth in agriculture, Indigenous peoples, peasant communities, and just transition organisations.

With over 120 individuals representing 72 organisations from 35 countries providing feedback, the result represents a wide comprehensive repository.

Short Description

The paper defines and conceptualizes the phenomenon of 'just transition litigation', providing a new frame for identifying and understanding the diverse justice claims of those affected by climate action. Meant as a first step to further investigate the phenomenon, the 6-page-paper offers a view to enhancing societal acceptance and support for the transition. These insights are crucial to identify pathways to ensure that climate policies and projects are designed and implemented to protect the rights and legitimate interests of the segments of the population most exposed to the negative impacts of the socio-economic transformations associated with the transition.

Strategic litigation, justice

Short Description

The disturbing trend of systemic abuse of communities and workers in renewable energy value chains has given rise to a tide of strategic litigation by Indigenous Peoples, frontline communities and workers left with no option but to turn to the courts to defend their rights. These lawsuits against renewable energy and transition mineral mining firms result in project delays, "stop orders" and escalating costs - risks which companies and investors can and must avoid through robust human rights due diligence and better project design. This tracking tool aims to be the primary hub for just transition litigation lawsuits against companies undertaking, and/or states authorising, transition mineral mining or renewable energy projects, where rightsholders argue the abuse of human rights and environmental rights.

Key Features

User-friendly interface, providing a clear overview on the cases, providing information on the type of lawsuit, the parties involved, the rights impacted, the sector and the natural resource impacted.

Detailed information and timeline for each case, with accessible vocabulary.

Additional sources included to dive deeper into the case.

European Policies

Short Description

The policy brief aims to set out why there cannot be a just transition without rethinking work in Europe more broadly. The cost of not broadening our understanding of a just transition to fully include already existing low-carbon jobs such as care and education is that tensions in Europe's labour market will rise. Other consequences include risks to social cohesion, regional disparities, urban-rural divide, and increasing inequalities. The paper advocates for stronger integration of work/employment, a just transition, and wider environmental policies within the EGD.

Target Group- Target Action

Civil Society Organizations, Educators, Learners

Key Features

Detailed careful revision of the main European policies impacting the Just Transition, from agriculture to education, energy and civil society.

Clear data that shows the current status of environmental issues, giving a clear picture to the readers but also allowing them to use the data to build a strategy on it.

Comprehensive recommendations towards the EU institutions and Member States that can be used as inspiration.

Key Features

Concrete examples from different countries, giving the reader the opportunity to confront his/her national situation with other realities.

The papers offer an insight of formal and non-formal education, highlighting its relevance in the just transition.

Area

Citizenship, education, skills

Short Description

The practices gathered in the framework of the Just4All project highlight the connection between environmental education and economic empowerment. By addressing not only educational needs but also providing other basic needs, these practices ensure comprehensive assistance that helps systematically disadvantaged groups commit and overcome barriers in the education process. The reported impact of these practices is extensive, encompassing psychological benefits such as improved mental health and reduced isolation, as well as enhanced citizenship, a stronger sense of community belonging, increased engagement in environmental activism, and economic empowerment through practical skills development.

Target Group- Target Action

Civil Society Organizations, Educators, Learners

Key Features

Six different practices, divided by theme, to support the reader in its search for practices in the just transition. Each practice provides examples coming from different backgrounds and voices.

Great variety of target audiences, including also many disadvantaged groups, such as women, elderly, adults with low levels of formal qualifications, youth, individuals from deprived areas, people with disabilities, migrants, deaf individuals, and communities in coal mining areas.

Just4All is an EU-funded initiative promoting a just transition through inclusive and innovative lifelong learning and adult education. The actions' overall objective is to support an inclusive recovery and digital and green transitions in Europe. More specifically, it aims to develop integrated, inclusive, and innovative adult learning and education (ALE) models that promote just transition, with a special focus on migrants, women, and low-skilled adults.

Titled "Building Social Innovation Learning Laboratories in Europe through a Just Transition for All and with All", Just4All is a two-year project running from October 2023 to September 2025.

WHY?

Improving adult education curricula, stimulating inclusive debates, and strengthening national and EU policies are all key to enabling Just Transition in Europe, including for women, migrants and low-skilled adults. With strong local and regional buy-in, Just4All will facilitate the implementation of the first principle of the European Pillar of Social Rights (EPSR) on Access to Education, training and lifelong learning, and its 20th on Access to Basic Services.

HOW?

Through this project, SOLIDAR & SOLIDAR Foundation aims to develop new tools, including a Massive Open Open Online Course (MOOC) to promote just transition through far reaching and inclusive teaching, facilitate to groups in a vulnerable situation including migrants, refugees and asylum seekers and women access to education and content related to just transition, and inform policymakers of the current situation, strengthening policies related to a just transition and facilitating the exchange of information and expertise among practitioners

WHO?

This partnership offers a wide range of expertise in the project's key areas, sustainable platforms for training and peer exchange, as well as a sounding board for new ideas and innovative tools. Together, SOLIDAR, EAEA and ICAE – bring more than 900 Civil Society Organizations from 75 countries in Europe and worldwide, a network with vast opportunities to disseminate the project's results and raise awareness on adult education and just transition.

Just4All

is a region-wide project with four target countries:
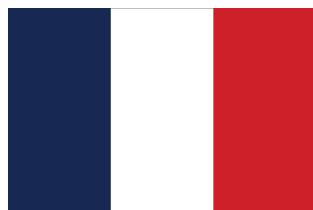

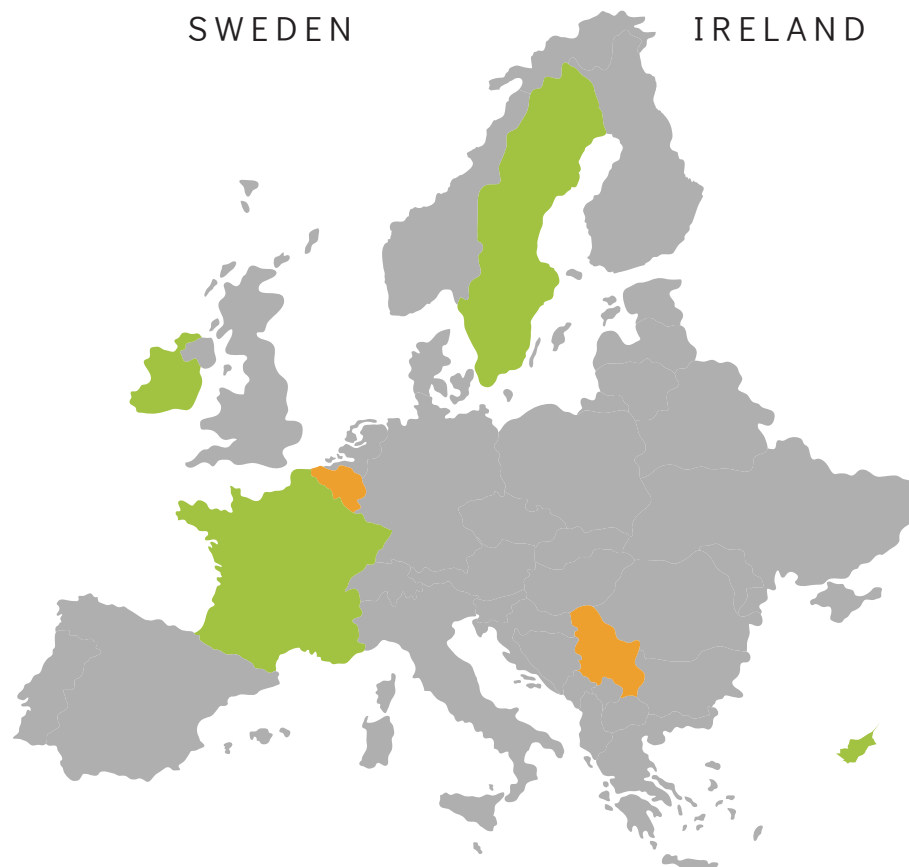

CYPRUS   FRANCE   SWEDEN   IRELAND

It is implemented by a 7-member consortium led by SOLIDAR, including the European Association for Adult Education (EAEA), the International Council for Adult Education (ICAE), Arbetarnas bildningsförbund (ABF), Ireland's National Adult Learning Organisation (AONTAS), the Center for the Advancement of Research & Development in Educational Technology (CARDET), and Ligue de l'Enseignement.
